Science Assembly

By Nadya, G8 Grace

Hello once again! The Ichthus students have been experimenting their way through life in school. Pretty hard, isn't it? In the Special Science Assembly held on 2 September 2015, the students were once again divided according to their houses.

This assembly was arranged by the Science Department, led by Mr Nonie. The system of the game follows the tradition of the oh-so-famous special assemblies, with houses - Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John - competing against each other to gain points, and the house who does not follow the rules will be disqualified. The Science Department have arranged a game that provided multiple choice questions. And again, as there are difficulty levels, the games were divided by three categories as follow; lower primary, upper primary, and secondary.

For the lower primary, the students were given a series of pictures and they had to guess what the pictures represent. It was quite different for the upper primary since the clues were read by the teachers and the students had to guess the answer. And lastly, for secondary, the students had to determine and examine an experiment that was shown as a video clip, and answer the question related to the experiment.

And with this, the special assembly ended with Luke House as the champion, followed by Matthew House as runner up, John House grabbing third place, and last but not the least, Mark House.

Zero Period

ATTENTION!

GUYS! I need to tell you something. CHRISTMAS IS NEAR!

Zero Period has once again commenced, this year Ichthus has prepared 3 different plays for the annual Christmas Concert. Teachers are getting busier preparing for the upcoming spectacle, while students have begun practicing their roles. Through all this they have been balancing and managing their time with school requirements that are currently going on at the moment.

What's the reason why zero period started so early? So that Ichthus will have more time to practice, making this year's Christmas Concert even more special, leaving parents and its audience in awe. The students of Ichthus School West will guarantee you that the Christmas Concert will be a blast! So be prepared for the time of your lives and see the performances gladly prepared for you.
